Egypt halts Arab League activity

By ANAN SAFADI Post Mideast Affairs Editor

Egypt yesterday announced that it was freezing all its activities in the 22-member Arab League following hostile action by Arab governments against Cairo for having signed the peace treaty with Israel.

The step came as Arab foreign conomic ministers met in Baghdad to decide on political and financial senctions against Cairo. All of the Arab League members sont envoys to the Iraqi capital with the exc tion of Sudan, Oman and Dilbouti.

Egypt was not invited. An Egyptian Foreign Ministry spokesman said that Cairo would no longer take part in collective meetings with Arab governments until "the day comes when wisdom shell overcome emotions and seriousness will replace irresponability in the Arab world."

The spokesman charged that the Bagbdad pan-Arab conferences were illegal since they were convened by the Iraqi government rather than by the Arab League's secretarygeneral, Mahmoud Riad - an Egyptian who has tendered his resignation from office, effective at the end of the month. Cairo radio said the spokesman acused the Baghdad conferece of baving fatled to appreciate the achievements Egypt made by signing the peace treaty: Israel's total withdrawal from

OPEC raises oil price 9%, okays surcharge

GENEVA (AP). — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) yesterday voted to raise the base price of crude oil by 9 per cent as of next Sunday, to $14.54 a barrel. Libya and Venezuela immediately amounced surcharges on the new

The new base price apparently was a victory for the so-called Arab moderates sueb as Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi over more militant members of OPEC, including Syria, Iran, Libya and Iraq.

The militants apparently settled for the smaller increase in the base price in exchange for the sur-tharges; analysis said. The new base price is the price which OPEC earlier had set for next October in its quarterly increase

The OPEC announcement yester day said that the oil ministers had authorized unlimited surchargee over the base price, depending on market demand.

Yesterday'e base price increase le roughly equal to surcharges an-nounced earlier by many OPEC members and eupercedee those surcharges. However, Libya announced it would raise prices $1.66 a barrel over the new base price. Venezuela announced a $1.20 surcharge.

Iran, which had lobbied for a 29 per cent increase in the base price, said it had no current plans for a surcharge.

Analysis here estimated the new hase price would add about $13.5b. to OPEC coffers this year from industrialized Western nations.

Sadat asks U.S. aid

Begin warns against Soviet-backed attacks

By DAVID LANDAU
Post Diplomatic Correspondent

WASHINGTON. - Egyptian President Anwar Sadat yesterday called on the U.S. Congress to help Egypt become the bastion of "stability" in the Middle East and northern Africa. Prime Minister Menahem Begin, for his part, told Congress that Israel wae the West's stable and reliable ally in the region, by virtue of its democracy, and ealled on the U.S. to "be on your guard" against Soviet-inspired assaults on liberty.

The Soviets, said Begin, etood behind the Arab rejectionist front. It Foreign Minister Andrel Gromyko visited Damaseus this week. Syria, Iraq, Jordan and Saudi Arabia were part of a "front of bostility and enmity," ho eald.

Both leaders appeared (eeparateiy) before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee. But each meeting was open to other members of the Senate and the House, respectively, and many of them took the opportunity to pay tribute, by their prolonged standing ovatione, to the two peacemakere.

"No citizen of our world is more respected or admired by the people of the U.S. than you," House Majori-ty leader Jim Wright (Democrat of Texas) told Sadat. And minority leader John Rhodes (Republican of Arizona) called Begin a "bero of peace" in hie weleoming words.

Sadat urged the legislators not to think in terme of 'the price of peace." Peace was "too precious to be an object of bargaining," he said.
What Egypt was proposing was not that the U.S. be the "polleeman" of the area, nor that Egypt be a "policeman." The most effective means of attaining security and stability was for every state to defend itseif, and thereby not allow dangerous vacuume to develop which were prone to draw in foreign 'intervention,' Sadat exid.

But the fact was, said Sadat, that many countries around Egypt were unable to defend themselvee - "and we would like to help them." This entailed for Egypt the assumption of "a epecial responsibility for protesting the Arab world and a good part of Africa from foreign intervenion...We are not looking for military adventure. But this means a heavy burden for us.'

Egypt was in "a unique strategie position," Sadat pointed out. Its ovolution of a relationship of cooperation with the U.S. in the military field would be "a bealthy partnership beneficial to both of us."

"If you cooperate with us," Sadat told the legislators, Egypt could be a military power that could act as a "deterrent" to outside intervention and could "ensure stability."

He was not proposing, Sadat said, an "alliance or axis - these would genorate more tenelon and aggression." Egypt, indeed, still believed "in the philosophy of nonalliance." But he sought 'relationship of coopwant to be strong enough

But basically we will emphasize eelf-reliance... Sadat once again invoked active U.S. support and involvement in the next stage of the peace process - the implementation of the Palestinian autonomy plan. He referred to the "two documents which we signed yeeterday." indicating that in Egypt's eyes the joint letter on the autonomy was as important as the peace treaty. "We intend to honour every word, and to implement in good faith" all the commitments in both the documents, the Egyptian

He antleipated 'enormous problema' in the autonomy egotiations, but said be was "determined to give these negotiations every chance to succeed." He was counting on the U.S., he said, to exerelse a moderating influence on Israel's positions. The success of the autonomy scheme was "a U.S. interest as much ac ours."

Sadat said that Egypt, like Israel. did not want to see Jerusalem divided by barbed wire again. But it did insist on the rights of the Mosiems to the Arab part of Jerusalem and on a reassertion of Arab covereignty there. He caid that at Camp David "90 per cent" of a formula on Jerusalem had been agreed upon.

Begin, in his presentations, warned direly of recent Soviet-backed eneroachments throughout the area. He counted eix countriee — Angola, Mozambique, South Yemen. Ethiopia, Cambodia and Vietnam in which there bad been "a takeover by Soviet proxy" during the past two

Begin urged the legislators not to doubt Israel'e resoive to pursue the peace process until it could live at eace with all of its neighbours. But, he warned, for all Israelis, save the small Communist Party. "eecurity is life itself...there is a national coneensus not to give up security."

Begin spoke of the bomb attacks that had already followed the treaty signing, committed by "those who want to tear the treaty to pieces." But, be said, "I do not despair...in God'e good tlme" all Ierael'e neighbours would join in the peace

"Liberty is in danger," the prime minister asserted. The Mideastern oil-producing statee could also become the "victims of this methodby-proxy ... Cairo sees prisoner release

'Israel agrees to make gestures'

By WOLF BLITZER
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — Israel bas agreed to Egypt'e request for a series of political gestures on the West Bank and Gaza Strip designed to en-courage Palestinian Arabs to join the proposed negotiations for the autonomy plan, Egyptian cources disclosed last night.

Meeting bere with a few jour-nalists, the cources eaid that Prime Minister Menahem Begin had informed Egyptian President Anwar Sadat that the Israel government will shortly propose that the Knesset abolish the administrative detention law, incorporated from the British Mandatory government, enabling the security authorities to arrest suspects without specifie charges being levelled.

As part of this process Israel has aleo agreed to release come prisoners, including an unknown number of the 23 administrative detainees now being heid.

The sources said that Israel will also ease eertain restrictions against political activities on the West Bank and Gaza Strip and will move various headquartere of the military government from the populeted cities to more remote areas.

The sources took issue with Prime Minieter Begin's ascertion that Israel and Egypt will open their bordere fully to tourism and trade immediately upon the reture of El-Arish to Egypt in two months. What was agreed, the sources said, was that there would be limited travel along the border, at first confined only to officials of the two governments involved in Impiementing various aspects of the treaty.

Israei wili aieo enable eome Palestinian refugees to return to the West Bank and Gaza Strip "for famiiv reunification purposes."

The sourcee said that these steps were agreed to orally by Begin and Sadat and would now be put down in a written document to be eent by Begin to U.S. President Carter and forwarded by the U.S. president to

The sourcee described these eteps as a "eymbolie" gesture which could go a long way towards improving the atmosphere on the eve of the ecbeduled autonomy negotiatione between Israel and Egypt.

Such steps have been discussed in various contexts between Ierael and Egypt since the Biair House negotiatione last October, the soorces noted.

The controversial issue of new Jewisb settlements on the West Bank and Gaza Strip is not involved in these political gestures, although Egypt will continue to press Israel to freeze settlement activity during the autonomy negotiations.

Prime Minieter Begin, during saveral appearances over the past few days, has strongly indicated that Israel bas agreed to some of these political gestures, although be has refused to provide details. At a news conference with Israeli

'Judea-Samaria' note added to treaty

By WOLF BLITZER Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — Prime Minister Menahem Begin insisted once again on including in the just-signed Israel-Egypt peace treaty package an "explanatory note" signed hy U.S. President Jimmy Carter explaining that the Israel government regards 'the West Bank" as referring to "Judea and Samaria."

This procedure, which was first used in the September 1978 Camp David framework agreements, has more than just semantle significance. "It goes right to the gut of the autonomy negotiations," one official said. "It'e not merely Begin's preference for use of the biblical names for the area."

The problem is that the Egyptians and the Americans regard East Jerusalem as part of 'the West Bank," while Israel does not include East Jerusalem as part of "Judea and Samaria." The issue is critical in determining the possible involvement of East Jerusalem and the Arabs who live there in the proposed autonomy negotiations, echeduled to start one month after the treaty has heen ratified by the Egyptian People's Assembly during the next fortnight.

One of the first Items on the agenda of those negotiations will be to define "the West Bank."

After Camp David, there were conflicting reports on the Israeli stance regarding the role of East Jerusalem Arabs in the negotiations. Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan was quoted in a press report — which he later denied — as saying that Jerusalem's

Carter said in the note, which is included in the treaty package: "I have been informed that the expression 'West Bank' is understood by the Government of Israel to mean 'Judea and Samaria'."

The entire question is also related to a more complicated and controversial matter: Does the proposed autonomy plan involve only the people who live on the West Bank, or the land as well? An Isracli committee of ministerial directorsgeneral, headed hy Eliahu Ben-Elissar of the Prime Minister's Office, has recommended in advance of the negotiations that only the people should be granted autonomy not the land.

In an ABC TV interview with Barbara Walters, President Sadat said that the Egyptian and American positions on the future of Jerusalem were "identical." He said: "All the changes that have taken place in Jerusalem are illegal from our point of view and from the American point of view also."

But the Egyptian leader insisted that the city should not he physically divided again. "In Camp David," he said. But Arah Jerusalem is sacred to us, sacred to 700 million Moslems. And Arah Jerusalem should return to the Arah sovereignty. Sadat continued: "But as I said. this time the city will not be divided...There will be no harbed wire like before."

He expressed confidence that all the difficult issues could eventually he resolved if everyone is "real...practical. If we should sit together, we should solve our differences. Peace, the goal of peace, is much more precious than anything."

Since arriving here, Begin has also tried to calm fears of a likely strain in Israel-Egyptian relations as soon as the autonomy talks begin in

He stated that Israel, during the coming six weeks, will prepare 'all our proposals. It will be a detailed plan, and we will present it to the Egyptians. Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek yesterday called on residents of the largely religious Bayit Vagan quarter to belp police find exremists whe painted swastikas and "harbaric" elogans on the wails of a local school building being used by secular pupils. The facade of the Merom Zion yeshiva in Rehov Hahida was found on Saturday afternoon with black paint daubed in crude lettering and Nazi symbols. The Hebrew slogans ealled for a "war to the finish against this despleable institution" and for a battic that would "purify the neighbourhood of this abomination." Kollek deelared that the firstsecond- and third- graders who study in the building must not be subjected to such "barbaric acts." The yeshiva building, which has been rented by the municipality for youngsters for whom there was no space in the nearby Yefe Nof state echool, has been the elte of trouble several times. TEL AVIV. - The National Religious Party bas gone on the warpath to woo its members away from Gush Emunim influence and to convince them that the NRP will be steadfastly on guard against any infringement of Israel'a rights in Judea, Samaria and Gaza.

Meanwhile, it is learned that Gush Emunim is considering the es-tablishment of its own national religious party to be called Hatchiya (rehirth).

Some within the NRP leadership are said to be worried ebout Gush Emunim's disenchantment with the party and fear that this will result in the loss of many votes at the next elections. The feeling is that those disappointed with the NRP's support for the peece treaty will defect and vote for some new anti-treaty party which may run for the Knesset — be it Gush Emunim's or Prof. Yuval Ne'eman's recently established political movement.

The NRP is now out to persuade party faithful that it is no less dedicated to safeguarding Israel's rights in Judea, Samaria and Gaza than is Gush Emunim, and that it is no less dedicated to furthering Jewish cettlement in those areas.

Education Minister Zevulun Hammer yesterday took off some time from his dutiee as acting prime minister to meet in Tel Aviv with yeshiva beads and settlers to convince them to take part in the NRP campaiga on the nature of autonomy. The NRP plans to hold a number of railies on the subject and its next Executive meeting will be held in the Samarian sattlement of

Meanwhile, Gusb Emunim leaders are said to be attempting to influence Rabbi Haim Druckman, MK, to boit the NRP. The Gush eeea Druckman as its representativa in the party. Druekmaa met Hammer on the question yesterday morning and said afterwards that he would have to spend a few days thinking over what he had heard. However, it is expected that he will stay in the NRP. Druckman save that he has received many appeals from treaty opponents like himself asking him to stay in the party and "form the vanguard in the struggle for Judea and Samaria."

Party insiders say that Druckman should have no problems about stay-ing ia the NRP, following its adoption of n tough stand on autonomy and its insistence on assurances from the prime minister that Israel's position in Judea. Samaria and the Gaza Strip will not be compromised. Those close to Druckman say that he is likely to stay in the party "for the time being, to make sure that Begin keeps his word.

The subject of the establishment of the new Gush Emunim party is con-troversial within the Gush Itself. Some members, headed by Hannan Porat, advocate that it he a new national religious party. Othere, headed by Gershon Shafat, would like to see a party not accessarily religiously oriented which could conceivably join Ne'eman's movement. Should Hatchiya ever be established, it might join Ne'eman in either case.

The party's youth convention, which opens in Jerusalem this evening, will be presented with n list of resolutions which include recommendations for the eventual annexation of the territories and a message of support for MK Genla Cohen,

The resolutione, drafted by a special committee, stand a good chance of being adopted since many of them were accepted unanimously by the committee members.

Among resolutions which were manimously approved was one which calls for considering the autonomy plan as an "interim arrangement leading to the eventual extension of Isrneli law to all of Judea, Samaria and the Gaza Strip.'

Another resolution calls for increased settlement in the territories and recommends the nationalization of land there.

Also unanimously approved was resolution which calls on the government to remove all bars to "private enterprise settlemeat in Judea, Samaria, Gaza and the Golan," and to allow anyone to purchase land

The world reacts to the Israel-Egypt peace treaty

Carter's role as mediator lauded

Jerusalem Post Correspondents and Agencies

European lesders newspapers, for the most part, yesterday lauded the signing of the Israell-Egyptian peece treaty le Washington on Monday afternoon, calling particular attention to the role played by U.S. President Jimmy Carter. However, some hedged on their approval by noting the unresolved Palestinian problem and the "ambiguitles" in the psace pact.

"Peace at last" read the banner headline in the Paris newspaper "France Soir," while "The Guar-dian" in London described the event thus: "In a century which has had its full measure of historic events, this is surely one of them." Chancellor Heimut Schmidt of West Germany said the treaty was a first step toward breaking the cycle of hatred and fear in the Middle East. Schmidt, whose government has been at odds with Washington over a range of lasues, praised Carter for his "unusual efforts" in negotiating the agreement ending more than 30 years of hostility.

But the chancelior warned that the world must not forgst that the rest of the Arab world rejects the treaty. and he urged the Arabs to svoid isolating Egypt.

England's press, which in the period before the signing had hardly a good thing to say, appeared to adopt s more positive attitude towards the treaty, now that it has

The previous theme had been that any treaty that ignored the Palestinian problem was more likely to lead to bloodshed than peace. But the "Daily Telegraph," for sxampls, concluded its "Brave peace" edilorish hy saying: "Let Britain and other European powere show more readiness than hitherto not to leave It all to America. We are allies, after all." The newspaper gave credit to Premier Menahsm Begin, President

Anwar Sadat and Carter. A huge reception was beld at the London Hilton Hotsi last night to herald the treaty, with more than 700 guests, including government ministers. Speakere included former premier Harold Wlison and MK Abba Ehan.

The Franch press, while welcoming the treaty aimost unanimously, was cautious. The pro-Socialist daily "Le Matin" said it was full of ambiguities, differences of interpretation and disagreements. The conservative "Le Figaro" said that the U.S. was now involved politically, militarily and financially in finding a solution to the Palestinian problem.

Germany's indspendent 'Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung' commented that the treaty could not have heen achieved without Carter. "He had no means of exerting pressure, only rewards — promises of American aid in credits, weapons and oli," the paper said.

Foreign Minister Hans Blix of
Sweden said that the Swedisb government greets the treaty with satisfaction and hopes it will he a first important step towards a comprehensive and lasting solution of the Middle East conflict.

Turkey, ln an official foreign ministry statement, expressed doubts over the chances of a 'separate'' Egyptian-Israeli treaty to hring durable peace to the Middle East. The statement stressed the need for a "comprehensive agreemant which would be satisfactory for all parties concerned." There were small protests against the signing in Moscow and Athens. Ahout 200 Arah students demonstrated outside the Egyptian emhassy in Moscow, waving placards and shouting slogans con-demning the treaty. The demonstration lasted about an hour.

About 100 Arab students at Athens University staged a protest rally. A police force stood by to prevent them from marching from the university in the centre of Athens to the Egyptian embassy.

Rumanian President Nicolae Ceausescu sent personal messages to Syrian President Hafez Assad and Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat. But the contents were not disclosed. Rumania is the only East European country to maintain dipiomatic ties with Israel.

Elsewhere, Chinese news media reported the signing without comment, hut diplomats said the wording of the naws reports indicated the treaty was not unwelcome to Peking.

The Japanese government welcomed the treaty and praised Carter's role as a mediator.

More than 200 slogan-sbouting demonstrators, including families of Arab diplomats, demonstrated outside the U.S. emhassy in New Delhi. The bour-long peaceful protest was organized by the youth wing of the

Paralysed Egyptian war veteran:

You've done something wonderful, Mr. Begin'

from war.

By DON SCHANCHE

Washington Post News Service CAIRO. -- "When Begin comes on Monday, I hope he visits us bere so I can tell him: 'You've done something wonderful, Mr. Begin. I can't do anything any more. I can't walk, but I am happy."

This was the response of Mohammed Aii, 28, a paraplegic victim of the Yom Kippur War. as he watched the televised images of President Anwar Sadat and Prims Minister Menahsm Begin shaking hands on the White House lawn after Monday's peace treaty signing

"The other Arab leaders must be harking now like dogs," laughed another wheelchair-bound victim of the 1973 war, Salah Abdei Hamid. His five companions, all paraiysed by spinal injuries sustained in the 1973 war and confined to wheelchairs at a veterans' rehabilitation centre on the outskirts of Cairo, laughed with him in a small, joyous celehration of the peace treaty.

"We pald the price for this, and we're getting the fruit now," sald Zahir el-Badri, a 26-year-old former army engineer who was wounded in the first hours of the war as he helped to lay a hridge across the Suez Canal.

The television lounge in the paraplegic hall of the Wafa WI Amal (Falth and Hope) Rehabilitation Centre may have been the best place in Cairo to gauge the feelings of Egyptians toward the peace treaty.

Although the group was small, the six veterans who must live with their memories until they die offered a powerful reminder to the outsiders who joined them at the television set that peace is never more blessed than to those who suffered the worst

At times during the White House ceremony, televised live to Egypt by satellite, the veterans laughed with joy and cheered. At other moments a sardonic remark like Hamid's set off a different kind of laughter, filled with hitterness at Arah leaders who have rejected the treaty and threatened Egypt with reprisals.

"Those Arahs are not like us because they don't have a place like this (hospital) in their countries," said Abdel Moneim Mahmoud, 27, who was wounded in the desert near Ismailiya eight days after the war hegan. "They don't have people like us to remind them. They don't know what war is."

"What do those Arahs want?" asked Ragah Ahdel Khader, 32, a veteran of both the 1967 and 1973 wars. "Do they want all Egyptians to he like me. In a wheelchair like this? Do they want us to heg ail our

Unlike the others, who were wounded hefore they had a chancs to taste normai adult life and marriage, Khader fathered a son hefore shrapnel cut the nerves of his spine and paralysed him from the waist down three days after the war

"But today I am the happlest person on earth," he sald, "Because now I will never see my hrother or die in a war." As Sadat hent forward to sign the three copies of the peace treaty.

Khader gleefully turned to his companions and observed in a medical simile born of painful experience in too many bospitals; "Sadat is like a surgeon cutting a cancer from our society, solving the prohiem hy hrave surgery.'

But the greatest praise for the Egyptian leader came from All; "The people whom I saw fall dead in the war, their souls must now he resting. President Sadat," ha said, ad dressing the television set. "I would like to write your name in gold. You are the greatest man in history."

"I swear to God this is a miracle, a tremendous miracle," said Badri as he watched President Carter and the two Middle East leaders circulating among the White House guests, kissing and shaking hands. "Why didn't they do It hefore?"

Badri sald that despite his handicap he still hopes to get married. "I didn't experience life," he said. "I was planning to get married. I paid a very expensive price, but today I can see what I paid for. Now I want to try again to get married, but I cannot hring a wife to this place. Please tell President Carter that I need an apartment equipped for people like us, and a car that I can drive even though I am paralyzed."

When Begin donned his skullcap to read a psalm in Hebrew at the end of his speech, Hamid said he would like to visit Israel when the borders hetween the two countries open. "Mayhe I will meet someone like me there, in a hospital or a place like this. During the war I saw Israelis who were like me die. Their bodies were thrown in the sand. Today all of us want to live.

ALEXANDRIA (AP): - "Shalom aleichem malachel hashalom." The wells of a small room rang with the shaky voices of elderly Egyptlan Jews as they chanted the ancient song — "peace he upon you angels of peace."

In a sparsely furnished sittingroom of a home for elderly persons six old men and a woman in their pyjamas hiessed the leaders of Egypt, Israel and the U.S. as they watched them on their TV sets signing the treaty of peace.

Their voices shook with emotion and tears filled their eyes. They sat as if taken hy magic and then broke out into handclapping and laughter, congratulating each other for living

A source close to the talks said earlier Friday that the WHA had accepted the NHL's offer for the Naw England, Edmonton, Quebec and Winnipeg franchises to join the NHL next season. Ziegler said that he could call another meeting of the NHL governors at any time.

One issue on which the two leagues are thought to be in disagreement is the number of players that can be retained by the four WHA teams for next season.

The NHL expansion committee apparently has been firm, bolding to a proposal of two skaters and two goaitenders. The four WHA franchises are hoping to get a new figure - possibly four skatere and one goaltender.

There was the whistled bar from "Hatikva" with the announcer a British transmitter trying to in-teriers and buzz him off the air. The Palestine Broadcasting Service was already, I think, off the air for good. There was always the faint hope that comeone would send us good wishee, that we might hear them before the batteries or our generator went on the blink again. We wanted to learn what was going on in the rest of the country — even if we did hear anything, it was difficult to tell, on account of the morale-raieing politierap type of newseast we were fed in those days. Nevertbeless, it was probably the radio that saved our lives, From it we learned that the Etzion Bloc, our neighbours to the couth-east, were under fire from Jordanian armoured cars and (as reports had it at the time) even tanks and artillery or mortare. We had no defences against those types of weapons. All we had were World War Two (and One) British rifles, down, after our last skirmish, to 30-rounds apiecs. A couple of light machine-guns and one ancient medium machins gun which snewered to the name of Sebwartzloser (1906 model) and was a genuine museum piece even then. We informed the Jerusalem com-

GUNTER AND GERDA Goelar, South African international stare, have been regular participants in the Israel International Bridge Festival. Today'e deal, in which Mrs. Goslar had to find a winning way, was played in the team-of-four event at this year'e Festival.

East-West made a valiant effort to buy the contract, but the Goslars having eubsisted for three months on a fortnight'e rations (no convoye had been able to come to our relief). Fortunately it had been a good year for rain. The fields were full of all kinds of edible weeds and we used to make regular nightly foraging raids. The roots of thistle are, if memory servee me right, particularly succulent. When we left, we dropped our falthful radio into the latrine. There was no point burdening ourselves with it and ingratee that we were, we rated it expendable.

BACK TO the songs. Did you know that that all-time favourite, "Hevenu Shalom Aleikhem," was, in its beginnings, nothing but a pun? That's what we gathered this self-same Monday, the 26th, in an interview by the one and only (yee, you guessed it) Miebaell. Once again the name of the interviewer eluded me, but the chap ecemed authoritative.

The essence of it was that "Shalom Aleikbem" the treasured granddaddy of all peace songs, wasn't intended as euch at all and started out as a Russian melody. The text revolved around Salam Aleikum elgarettee - then a popular Ruma-nian brand. Text composer: none other than the late Abba Khoushy.

Ditto "Hava Nagila" — a spon-taneous exclamation based on an old Hassidic song and given a new text on the spur of the moment to celebrate the hasty departure of the Turks from the Tel Aviv area come 60-something years ago.

OUR SECRET weapon of success in the Washington talks: the "Shabbat phone," a new device which enables people to use the telephone without desecrating the sanctity of the day. No details were given in the religious notes following Monday's 4 o'clock psrmleelon to evacuate the news; but as we understand it, it in ueable as a mierophone) which switchee Itself on automatically.

Special education at home

THE CHILD with learning dis-abilities is a handleapped child, and as such needs special care, extra patience and forbearance in every aspect of his growing up.

These are the children who have, in the paet, been labelled as minimally brain-damaged; although phyeleal damage to the brain may never have been medically proven. defects in sensory perception were very much in evidence. Since the child's handicap manifested itself in the area of learning, the chief emphasis had been placed (and rightly eo) on providing special belp in reading, writing and maths.

What is eeldom emphasized is that this child may also be a manage-ment problem at home, since the eame peculiarities that affect proper learning also affect out of school Children with Isarning disabilitiee ome in all the shapes and sizes They range from the robust to the frail, from pretty to plain and from the very hright to the retarded. If the ehild is heelthy and bright, it is sometimes difficult for a parent to accept the fact that peculiar beheviour is not just a matter of wilful disobedience.

Long after a parent has come to terms with his child needing all kinds of special help to make it in school, he may etlli be chorttempered and impatient with the child at bome. Not because of lack of concern, but simply because it is difficult to associate psychological and educational cymptome and ter-minology with the daily routine at

GIVEN THAT FAULTY visual and auditory perception, byperactivity, impulsiveness and perseveration are serious drawbacks in the classroom what do they have to do with irritating and disobedient behaviour at home? Everything.

Just as a epecial education teacher working with such a child needs to learn many techniquee to teach the same old multiplication facts, so parents of this colld must resort to training methods that weren't needed for his elblinge. It is no good sereaming at him because be spills his milk at every meal. It will do neither of you any good. A normal child will remember the scolding and try to be more eareful; the child we are discussing will remember the scolding (and probably with a great deal more shame and anguish than the normal child), but be'll go right on epilling. Either be does not know what be is doing wrong or is ineapable of changing.

The same faulty epacial perception and shape discrimination that causes so much difficulty when It comes to reading could also be what makes this child eeem clumsy and aceldent-prone around the house. The same perceveration - that tendency to persist and persevere in saying that 6 times 7 is 46, long after be knows this is incorrect - makes it difficult for him to change the way he holds his fork, although he is long past the age when he should know

The impulsiveness - that tendency to do the first thing that pops into his mind without any rectraint or consideration of the results - that eausee him to fail examinations on material he knows well, also makes him socially unacceptable to his peers, and a nightmare when you are entertaining guests because you never know what inappropriate utterance will come out of his mouth.

THE PARENT, like a special educa-tion teacher, needs to learn a variety of ways to teach the same task; to anticipate, when poscible, difficulties and practise efficient ways of doing something before inefficient behaviour-becomes fixed; to ereate many opportunities for doing the same kind of exercise without eausing the child to rebel from boredom

Above all the parent must learn to do these things without causing the youngster to be shamed by his shortcomings, which could lead to even more problems. In every instance, the parent must be sure to make demands and give instructions that are elearly understood and always

Table behaviour. Whether It is spilling, fisting tools like a three-yesr-old, or the older child's chores of cetting the table or washing up, be patient in chowing the child exactly how to do the task. Expect to repeat the demonstration many, many times. Just as a special education teacher will take a child'e hand and trace shapes and letters, co you stand behind the child at the table and practice placing his cup in the spill-proof place, or practice using the knife and fork. Remember that the normal rhild will make mistakee ond learn from them, but the perceptually handicopped child tends to perpetuole them. Since it is very much more difficult for him to unlearn incorrect movements, the time invested in teaching him to do things effectively is time saved

Social Interaction. Whether talking to bis teacher or to a grandparent, this child eeems to have little eense of what is appropriate. He finds it difficult to accept (or execute If be accepts; the concept that one doesn't speak to an older person or a headmaster in the same words or tone of voice as with one'e peers.

For the first- or second-year high echool youngster this is not really a ease of excessive hutapa; it is e matter of poor impulse control. A parent can help by anticipating situatione and reheareing them beforehand, If your 15-year-old son is eet on a collision course with his teacher because he's rebelling at uniform requirements or homework demands, try to "role-play" the situation with him. "What do you think the teacher will say?" "How will you respond if the teacher does...or says...?" In the eame way, if you are going to visit grandparents, or have holiday dinner with relatives, it is easier to tell him in advance what is expected than to turn off unwanted behaviour once it has started. If be has practised how to behave in advance, he may still not remember, but then a whispered word or a restraining hand on the shoulder may eave the situation.

Distractability. Typically, children with learning disabilities have trouble concentrating, and are very easily disturbed and distracted during lessons. Learn from the special education teacher who trice to limit all stimuli except that of what she is trying to teach.

NOT EVERY CHILD with learning disabilities is over-active, impulsive or highly distractable. That a child has poor motor control in no way in-dleates whether be has trouble writing legibly or folls over his own feet when walking acrose the room. The differences are so tremendous. both in kind and in degree, that the epecial educatioe teacher eategorizee each child not by a label. but according to his abilities. In the tutorial room, this teacher doesn't repeat the techniques of the elassroom teacher since it has already been proved that the child could not learn in that way. He finds out what the child can do and attempts to apply the child's strong points in remediating his learning defleiency. The same principle applies to out-of-school learning.

The parent, bowever, may not be able to identify the child'e most effective learning modality, or to apply it if he does. This parent should use the speelal education teacher as a resource person who will explain which techniquee bave worked in the tutorial room and bow to apply them to other eltuations.

Whatever you do, don't keep yelling. "I told you a million times already bow to set the table." That's Aharon Dovrat, joint general menager, noted that "1978 was a wonderful year for Clal, although we hope 1979 will be even better." In 1979 Clal, which holds interests in 180 Ieraeli companiee, chowed net profits (after tex) of IL442m., a 152 per cent increase over the IL175m. earned by the end of 1977. Despite the huge amount of companies it has interests in, Clal managed to get all of them to finish their individual halance eheets within 80 days after December 31, eo it could draw up its own halance eheet ehortly afterwards.

Of the IL442m. in net profits, the industrial division (cement, foundrice, electricity plants and textiles), contributed the greatest part, 1L220m. This was followed by the commercial division, which provided IL50m, in profits, followed hy IL30m, hy the third division, construction and real estate. remarkable performance, con-sidering that the banks produced a net profit of only between 38 and 45 per cent," Dovrat said. According to a chart which the company had drawn up, IL1,000 invested in Clal shares in 1974 would have grown to IL5,650 (or 560 per cent) hy the end of 1979, if all dividends and other benefits were ploughed back into acquiring new shares. During these five years the cost-of-living index roce by 533 per cent and the dollar hy 452 per cent. However, as Dovrat admitted, the figures for the index and dollar do not take into account any interest paid on index-linked bonds or foreign currency accounts, which would have brought the yield from thees investments to a considerahiy higher figure.

Moreover, the company'e growth in profits was uneven. For the first ree years (1974, 1975 and 1979), the vield from a share was far helow that of the rise in the index or the dollar. However, during the last two years, 1977 and 1978, the reverse became true. The yield on a share ecared past that of the index and the dollar. In 1978 alone, the yield on a share was twice as much as the rise in the index and 4.5 times that of the rise in the dollar.

During 1979 Clal mobilized IL500m. through its subsidiariee, mainly Cial Industries, Maniv, Cial Real Estate, Electra, Ordan, Hassuta and Azorim. This allowed the company to double its liquidity position, which stood at IL1,250m. at the and of 1978.

(including funds and reserves) stood at IL1.097m., a 90 per cent increase over the IL575m. at the end of 1977.

"Our balance sheet and our profit and loss etatement looks eo good for three reasons," Dovrat said. "First, we succeeded in consolidating our management; eecond, we took swift decisions, like replacing key per-sonnel when this was called for; and third, we are a highly diversified group and thus have not placed all our eggs in one hasket."

The group made sales totalling IL4,291m. in 1979 (IL2,289m. the previous year). Of this, exports accounted for only IL853m.

Although this was a considerable jump over the total of ILSS3m. in exports in 1977, Friedman admitted that "even if exports grew, they did not grow fact enough, mainly because the cost of production rose faster than the incoms from eales (mainly in dollars) ahroad." Moreover, the local market was ready and able to pick up all goods produced.

Dovrat noted that this year the concern planned to invest IL 800m. in expansion. Moreover, it would prohahiy invest another IL400m. in the initial stages of the new cement plant at Arad, which chould cost, in all, some IL1,300m. in the first stage. The first stage chould produce 500,-000 tons of cement a year.

However, he believed that duc to the increased need for cement in the South (due to the new eccurity linc), construction of the second etage, which would bring production up to one million tons a year, might have to he speeded up. The entire plant would cost IL2,500m. (at 1979

Dovrat also noted that Clai was eelling its IL6m. worth of IL10 (nominal value) shares in Tefahot, which would bring the firm a profit of about IL100m.

TEL AVIV. - A centre for Chiropractic, the ecience which deale with curing ailments hy manipulating the spinal column, has been opened in the Beit Hakerem quarter of Jerusalem by two young American immigrants.

The profession, which is recognized by Medicare and most health insurance schemes in the U.S., has not been given an official status by the Ministry of Health here, but the ministry has adopted an unofficial "hands-off" policy. In the U.S., there are some 20,000 practitioners, who have to finish four years of chiropractic training in a college to which they are admitted only after receiving a degree from a four-year university.

Short-term relief for exporters may end soon

By MACABEE DEAN

Jerusalem Post Reporter TEL AVIV. - The declining value of the Israel pound during the past few weeks, by seven to eight per cent, has helped exporters here regain seme of the prefitability on the goods they ship abroad, eccording to Rami Gutt, directer general of the Export Institute.

During most of 1975, the cost of production, which is influenced by the cost-ef-living index and higher wages and cests for electricity, rese much faster than the devaluation of the Israel pound. Thus, exporters were caught between rising productien cests and falling income from dollar exports. Hewever, Gutt noted that the advantage might enly be an eight per cent hike being discussed fer March, due te the influence ef higher prices fer fuel and other basic manufacturing elements.

"This will in effect wipe eut the higher inceme from dollar seles. And unless the dollar is devalued faster than the riss in the index, the country's experiers will face some very herd times," he added.

French humbug

FOR THE PAST 12 years, ever since the Six Day War, efforts to hring about a peace between Israel and the Arab states through face-to-face talks have been systematically resisted by just one leading member of the Western camp. This regular spoiler has

During the prolonged UN debate in the summer of 1967 it was France that most forcibly argued against any expectation of genuine peace, any time soon, in the Middle East. When this thesis went down to defeat, and the Security Council decided that a "just and lasting peace" in the area was imperative. French diplomacy turned to a search for a four-power consensus to impose a settlement on Israelis and Arabs.

Now, faced with the fact of a peace treaty successfully negotiated between Israel and the biggest and strongest Arab country, Egypt, France is going out of its way to disparage this singular, historic achievement.

Thue it is French opposition, quietly but effectively articulated, which is mainly responsible for the failure of the European Community to come out unambiguously in support of the Israel-Egyptian accord.

France is not saying that the treaty signed in Washington on Monday is merely a first step that must, for its ultimate success, he followed hy further steps leading to a settlement with all the still embattled Arah states, and to a solution of the Palestinian problem.

This le Britain's official position, and it ls, in essence, acceptable not only to Egypt but to Israel as well.

As viewed from the Elysee Palace, the treaty represents a step in a wholly wrong direction. It is, according to high French officials cited in one report, "a misgulded effort, motivated primarily by the Carter administration's need for foreign policy success rather than by an accurate analysis of Middle East

A correct analysis of Middle East politics, French style, is apparently one that is based upon the premise, and that leads back straight to the conclusion, that nothing can be done to advance peace in the region that does not meet the demands of the most doggedly bellicose among the Arab states.

It so happens, of course, that it is precisely these states, notably Iraq and Libya, which provide France with the larger part of its requirement in oil, in exchange for sophisticated French arms.

Friendly French officials, trying to explain their government's wayward policy to bewildered Israelis, openly acknowledge this melancholy fact as the underlying motive. They, at least, do not seek to conceal France's own desperate sense of weakness by exposing spurious faults in the Americans.

Not so, however, President Giscard. Although he has broken with the Gauilist practice of spiting the U.S., and has in fact sought closer ties with it, M. Glscard has also been showing excessive fondness for blaming western reverses around the world, on Washington's "abdication of power."

At the same time, somewhat inconsistently, he has been working, sometimes in concert with the Soviet leadership, to undermine American efforts to build up centres of stability and to protect western interests. The most obvious recent example of this is France's attitude towards the Israel-Egyptian accord an attitude that can only be accounted for by the short-term, parochial interests of a hopeless pretender to big-power status.

M. Giscard has also made some tentative moves towards an improvement in France's relations with Israel. But his adamant refusal to back up the peace accord is a throwback to the dark days of outright Gaullist hostility. For once, it puts collision course with the leading Arab country as well.

THE PEACE TREATY elgned hetween Egypt and Israel on Mondey, after euch long and arduous negotiations, is en important mllestone in the relations between the two countries.

number of cease-fire agreements;

preceded the present treaty.

It is too early to say wbether the peace treaty is the most significant among these instruments. True, it is the only one entitled with the very pregnant term "peace." But peace is not necescarily guaranteed by a peace treaty. Indeed, most wars begin between statee that aiready have a peace treaty.

The trouble with the present treaty is that, whereas it puts an end to the state of war between Egypt and Israei, it fails to resolve a number of outstanding issues which both parties regard as crucial to the pursuit of peace.

Paradoxically more than a year was consumed by debates over cap tious legal nuances and epecious verbal formulas. An outstanding example of this was the artificial problem of Article 6, paragraph 5, purporting to eetablish the prevalence of the treaty over previous conflicting agreements with other countries.

This provision was bereft of juridical value in the first place (inasmuch as no such prevalence

Its importance derives escentially from the fact that Egypt and Israel have managed to reach an agreement. Yet it must be borne in mind that this is by no means the first agreement concluded between the two: the armistice agreement of 1949, the disengagement-of-forces agreement of 1974, and the interim agreement of 1975 (not to mention a Ultimately, a compromise was reeched whereby an accompanying letter was appended to the treaty (in this way extinguishing the "soui" that still mysteriously abides in the treaty 1.

> IT IS INTERESTING to consider what might have happened had the Israell negotiators epent as much time and energy on eerious issuee as they did on matters of marginal consequence. But, curiously enough. while continuously warning the public that time was not operating in Israei's favour, they deemed it fit to leave numerous contentious issues to take care of themseivee in time. Foremost among these is the allimportant question of Palestinian autonomy in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, to which Israel is com-mitted under the Camp David Fremework Agreement of September 1978.

Autonomy is e political coin cir-

The meaning of autonomy, Jewish settlement in the West Bank and other matters not conclusively dealt with in the treaty signed in Washington make it merely one more interim agreement between Egypt and Israel, argues YORAM DINSTEIN.

Egypt regards autonomy as a first step to a Palestinian state, whereas Israel views it as a means to forfend the creation of such a state. Negotiatious over this momentous question will begin in a ebort while, and they are likely to prove that, peace treaty or no peace treaty,

> > A related problem entirely overlooked by the peace treaty is that of Jewish cettlements in the West Bank. Such settlements are taken for granted by the Israeli cabinet, but are anathema to Egypt. Should new settlements be established there, the two parties will almost inescapably find themselves on a collision course.

Egyp: and Israel are still worlds

Relations between Egypt and Israel are liable to be coured over other thorny issues as well. The peace treaty calle for further negotiations over such mundane but significant matters as trade, aviation and cultural relations. It enables the parties to submit to a joint commission — which has still to be formed - claims potentially running to billions of dollars, which neither party can afford to pay. And no technique has been devised to take care of disputes relating to the application of the treaty.

The treaty's principal feature is that it sweeps problems under the rug. The whole legal set-up is founded on the irrebuttable presumption that nothing can go wrong. Yet so many points of divergence between Israel and Egypt are loaded with political dynamite that it will be a miracle if none of them explodes.

Only future negotiations ean defuse these issues and guarantee that the parties reach a final agreement which will enable them to live in veritable peace with one another. Until such a final agreement is concluded, the present treaty must be looked upon as merely another interim agreement.

hawks who are opposed to any at promise with the Arab count have insisted (principally for tical reasons) on postponing the c clusion of a peace treaty until the too-ohvious differences of opin between Egypt and Israel in reg to the nature of Paleeting antonomy have been ironed out. A SURFEIT OF SPECTACULARS

MARK SEGAL wonders why there has been such a feeling of anti-climax about the signing of the peace treaty.

SO THE INCONCEIVABLE hes happened. Even the most fervent critics of Menahem Begin will not be able to deny him this moment in history. No one should grudge him his triumph, though it came at the price of abandoning all his previous guide-lines and leaving his disciples out in limbo. What was an impossibility iess than two years ago has now become reallty. No one can take that away from him.

Yet for many of us, what should have been a zenith in our lives has been marred by an overdose of treacly theatricality. We have all been made to feel that we are extres in the Jimmy Carter Show, and that our very future has been slotted into the contest for ratings between the three American networks.

The marquees put up in the White House grounds for the ceremony reminded me more of a circus than of a large, jolly, interfalth wedding. I almost expected to see sideshows like "The Wall of Death." The place overflowed with political acrohats, and I only hope the various documents provide adequate safety

Why is there such a feeling of anticlimax? Is it because we felt we were heing bored into peace as we ducked the painful rain of clichés pouring out of our TV and radio sets? Is it because too many moments of truth add up to one long hour of yawning somnolence? It may well be that a curfelt of Begin spectaculars has just become too much of a muchness, like living on a diet of chocolate éclairs. As the Knesset debate indicated, the great hope for peace is accompanied hy a profound eense of diequiet. A chronicler of the times will no doubt record the lack of buoyancy in the public mood. The euphoria and elation which greeted the Sadat visit have ebbed (come cay it was frittered awayi Into the current stream of resignation and ecepticism. Ie it perhaps because of the fat bill we are being asked to pay on the morning after the grand party? Or maybe it is due to a widespread feeling that we are watching a replay of that old movie, "The Spirit

The majority mood seems to be: We've tried so many wars, wby not peace for a change? If it results in another war, well, we've been through that before, and at least we'll know that we did our best, and our soidier sous will bave no doubts that we did.

Perhaps the most apposite symbol might be Nachshon, the biblical man of courage, who led the way into the Red Sea for the Children of Israei. In a way we are all extending our collective toee, albeit gingerly, into the beckoning waters before making

GIVEN THE DISMAL domestic record of this government, it might be too much to expect any of our eenior ministers to go on the air in order to allay the people's anxieties, even about such a possible eide-effect of the opening of our borders as the flooding of the market with cheap labour.

Then again, would it be too much to expect one of our leaders to go and speak things over with the Sinal settlers, the designeted casualties of the peace treaty? After all, they were not to know that after being sent by one government to redeem the wilderness and create e buffer zone between Sinai and Caza, another government would uproot them. They are fellow citizens and deserve the courtesy of a proper explanation from our rulers.

It is certainly not good enough, as Acting Premier Hammer would have it, to project e cloud of Pickwickian hopes that Egypt may he persuaded to let them stay when the three-year commitment comee up for redemption. There are too many personal tragedies involved in this mass eacrifice.

Will posterity's verdict focus on the role of Moshe Dayan, son of Degania and Nahalal, in converting Israeli farmers into a new kind of Jewish refugee? Or will It judge Dayan as Begin's fall guy? But then, did not Jahotinsky eet the historical pattern hy urging the evacuation of the Tel Hai defenders, dismissin arguments that the borders of Upper Calliee would be jeopardized

IT WOULD BE an encouragement to think that with the peace treaty hehind us, the government will start. at long last, to devote its energiee to domeetle issues. There seems to have been a loes of contact with the problems besetting ordinary citizene, like the inexorable rise of the cost of living, the critical shortage of housing, and an indifferent official approach to the war on crime. Someone in the Kirya bas yet to admit that the ideological impulse of lowering food subsidies may have been a mistake and that the Likud may yet pay heavily for the recultant widening of the social gap.

For the average man and woman, peace is a rather abetract idea, however interesting It may be for politicians, generals and journaliets. What is tangible and known to them is the trebling of the price of eggs and other commoditiee, the soaring cost of everything else, and their inability to buy a home for their children. On top of which, Finance Minister Ehrlich has once again demonstrated his egregious lack of understanding of the public mood by already talking of taxing the nation for peace.

There is nothing more bitter than disappointed love, and the public oplnion polle already reflect the feelings of disenchanted Likud voters (not to mention the defunct DMC). Admittedly, the latest poils were taken before the Carter visit and the ensuing peace treaty hullahaloo: but given the unstoppable deterioration on the economic front, I venture to predict that in a matter of weeks, dis-content over the economic management of the country will dominate the minds of a people as yet unable to discern the fruits of peace.

READERS' LETTERS

To the Editor of The Jerusolem Post Sir. - I want to bring to the attention of your readers the story of the recent tragic death of my wife who, in her agonizing last bours, was denied admittance and medical assistance at Rambam Hospital in

My wife was brought three times to hospital on a stretcher in a Magen David Adom amhulance, unable to move and in excruciating pain. Each time, she was refused the most elementary ald, as she was considered clinically healthy! For five days, I had to try to alleviate her torment by myself, as I found no doctor willing to treat a chronic lymphatic leukemia patient who was under the care of the Haematology Department of Rambam Hospital. No one can imagine my wife's physical and mental torment as well as mine, with no help in sight until, in the end, my wife died in shock, two hours after finally being hospitalized. What are the criteria under which a patient should he hospitalized? Should only those with heart attacks he admitted? Or those with a temperature above 37 degrees? CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, - On March 18, you reported that a Beduin truck driver was accused of accidentally running over a bahy and killing it and was then freed on bail.
